

PRESIDENT FINDS HIMSELF AT WAR WITH CONGRESS

Battle Rages on Three Fronts With Congress That Is Preponderantly Democratic

SENATE UNFRIENDLY

Fight for Control of Democratic Party and Nomination At 1940 Convention

By George R. Holmes
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(INS)—President Roosevelt found himself at war today on three fronts with a Congress that is preponderantly Democratic.

Not since the days of Woodrow Wilson, two decades ago, has any President been so at loggerheads with the Legislative branch, especially the Senate, which has proved the stumbling block of many chief executives.

Inextricably woven into the controversies between the White House and Capitol Hill is a fight for control of the Democratic party, which carries with it the nomination of a Presidential nominee in 1940. It is a struggle that will determine, in the final analysis, whether there is to be a continuation of the New Deal, as at present constituted, or a return to power in the party of the more conservative elements in the party.

In whatever direction Mr. Roosevelt looked today he faced party controversy—with the 76th Congress barely a month old, and the Democrats heavily in the majority in both houses. Take the issues of:

Foreign policy—The Democrats are badly divided, one wing demanding Congressional halterstrings that will make mandatory American neutrality in the event of war, no matter how hard-pressed the democracies may be against the aggression of totalitarian states; the other wing favoring freedom of action to assist the democracies in any methods short of war and actual American involvement.

The letters were received last February and March just before the body of Peter Levine, 12, was discovered in Long Island Sound.

Franco Smashes Forward

Perpignan, France, Feb. 8.—General Franco's insurgent forces smashed forward today to complete the subjugation of Catalonia, but Spanish government officials advised they would continue to fight even if all Catalonia is lost.

The insurgents launched a sudden "final" drive to occupy the last strip of Catalanian territory remaining in the hands of the government forces.

A Salamanca communique claimed the insurgents advanced 17½ miles on one sector, capturing nearly forty villages and mountain passes.

THIRD REICH REACHES WIDE IN PREPAREDNESS

In War's Event, Industry Could Be "Harnessed" at Press of Button

ON WARTIME BASIS

By Pierre J. Huss
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—(INS)—Hitler's Third Reich in 1939 is expected to reach such widespread preparedness for the event of war that, figuratively speaking, all national industry can be completely harnessed to the war machine overnight through pressing of a button.

In the words of Rudolf Brinkman, State Secretary of the Reich Ministry of Economics, "it can be said without presumption that no other country in the world surpasses Germany in the systematic adjustment of economic life to military requirements." Herr Brinkmann added: "German economic life is completely permeated by soldierly spirit."

In a gigantic peace-time effort, the Third Reich is placing its key industries on what practically amounts to a wartime basis, permitting in an emergency complete industrial mobilization in the shortest possible time. Each of these industries is supervised by a special commissioner working in close co-operation with Field Marshal Goering's Four Year Plan staff. The motor vehicle industry is working under Colonel von Schell, who in his army career won a reputation as a highly efficient organizer.

As a first measure Colonel von Schell ordered the standardization of:

A year ago it was estimated that Germany needed one million more houses, and now the shortage is put at two millions. The sharp increase is to a large extent due to the huge Government and Nazi party buildings now being erected under the supervision of Dr. Todt, which necessitate the demolition of large blocks of flats.

The German machine industry is being adjusted to military needs by Dr. Lange, a member of the board of directors of the National Association of Machine Construction. This branch of industry is to help reduce the lack of workers by substituting machine power for man power. Dr. Lange has ordered that "self sufficiency in spare parts and raw materials be attained to the highest possible extent."

For 1938 the total output of Germany's machine industry is valued at five and a half billion marks (approximately $2,200,000,000). Before the war, the record annual production was 2,800,000 marks ($1,120,000,000). In 1938, machines exported from Germany represented a value equivalent to sixteen per cent of the total German exports for the year.

Under Major General Hanneken's supervision, German pig-iron production for the year 1938, as compared with the year 1937, increased by fourteen per cent to 18,600,000 tons. Raw steel output increased by eighteen per cent during the same period to 23,300,000 tons. By the autumn of 1939 the first blast furnace of the gigantic iron and steel works "Herman Goering" in Salzgitter, near Brunswick, will be in operation.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE JAMES' FISCAL POLICIES

Opposition Grows As Assembly Meets To Push Through $22,000,000 Relief Sum

TO ADJOURN FRIDAY

By Raymond Wilcox
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Feb. 8.—(INS)—Opposition among Democratic legislators to the James administration fiscal policies grew as the General Assembly met today to push through a $22,000,000 relief appropriation preparatory to adjourning Friday for a two-week recess.

Most of the debate on the twin subjects of relief and finances centered in the Senate where members of the Democratic minority objected strenuously to "being sent home" while "professional social workers" advised the Governor.

"You have a majority here now," said Sen. Harry Shapiro, Democratic floor leader, "but I want to warn you that sometimes those with a majority suddenly wake up to find that they don't have a majority. Don't send us home now. Let us remain to give the Governor the benefit of our counsel."

But Republican Senators overrode the minority protests and with the aid of two Democratic Senators—Joseph P. Dando, Schuylkill, and William J. Eroe, Jr., Lawrence-Beaver—voted to recess until February 27. Dando was making his first appearance this week in the Senate since the session opened while Eroe has voted almost consistently Republican since the session began. The $22,000,000 relief appropriation is up for final passage in the House today following which it will be sent to the Senate for final approval, permitting the Legislature to adjourn Friday morning after a midnight session.

Republicans said the recess was necessary to permit Governor James to complete his budget.

IS IMPROVED

Francis Cheatley, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cheatley, Emille Road, Newportville, who has been ill for the past month, is improving, and expects to return to school next week.

CREDIT SQUAD WITH SAVING LIFE

The Point Pleasant, N. J., First-Aid Emergency Squad makes the headlines of the newspapers of the State and also many throughout the nation in saving the life of David Morris. Summoned by the child's parents who say he had apparently stopped breathing while fighting pneumonia, the Squad worked for 156 hours with resuscitation equipment. After squad men and ex-council president William R. Borden blew breath into the body of the youngster for several minutes, while their inhalator was being set up. The child is now convalescing.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Urging that his listeners do their part to "Keep America Safe for Americans," Frank Gwynn, Allentown, state commander of the American Legion, addressed a gathering of members of Nase-Kraft Post, 255, Sellersville, and their guests from posts at Quakertown, Perkasio, Fountain Hill, Allentown, and other points, a few nights ago.

Mr. Gwynn urged the veterans of Bucks county to contact their Congressman and demand passage of the Universal Service Act.

The district commander, Ray L. Hemmerly, Melrose Park, asked for inspection reports from Perkasio, Quakertown and Sellersville posts. In addition to other post commanders who were guests, George Schlegel, commander of the Allentown Post, was present.

Although attendance at the sale of personal property belonging to Monroe Hunsberger held Saturday afternoon on the farm of his father-in-law, Abraham Gahman, a short distance north of Plumsteadville, was quite large, only fair prices were received for a majority of the things.

It is estimated that a crowd of 500 persons was on hand when Auctioneer I. Erwin Yothers took the block at the beginning of the sale.

Miss Maud L. Wagner, Red Cross rural school nurse for the middle section of Bucks county, in her travels of 1090 miles during January, made 142 visits.

The usual routine of nursing work was conducted during the month. Follow-up work for the correction of physical defects was the main feature. Five children were listed for tonsilectomy at Abington Hospital. Ten pupils were accompanied to the eye clinic and oculist and were fitted with glasses. The dental clinics were held two days each week.

The nurse gave a talk on nursing to forty high school pupils at the Buckingham school.

Miss Wagner's activities were listed as follows: Health supervision: visits to pre-school children, 6; school children, 75; adults, 9; home visits.

Building and construction is placed under Dr. Fritz Todt, who holds a commission as a major in the reserve. Under his wing are the new motor roads and the western fortifications. The machine industry is entrusted to Dr. Karl Lange, while iron and steel production is under the supervision of Major-General von Hanneken.

As a first measure Colonel von Schell ordered the standardization of:

Numerous articles which the average family discards will be welcomed for use in the special class at Morrisville, according to the announcement made by Miss Millie Altrichter, instructor, at the meeting of Morrisville P. T. A.

These include: Pound cans, old jars, clean rags, new patches of cotton goods, old silk stockings. It was this special class which featured the program at the last meeting with a minstrel and exhibition of its work.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Making Him Too Noble

Washington, Feb. 7. SOMETIMES as much damage is done in politics by extreme praise as by extravagant denunciation. It is as possible to have too much of the one as it is of the other, and the new Attorney General, Mr. Frank Murphy, appears in some slight danger of being given an excessive dose of adulation by his friends.

—O—

FOR one thing, he is being made to appear just a little too holy. Unwise comparisons that have appeared in magazines and newspapers of his likeness, physical and moral, to certain great Biblical figures and the picturing of him as a soulful and unselfish public servant who habitually lives upon the higher plane and whose sole concern is for the welfare of mankind, have been carried slightly too far.

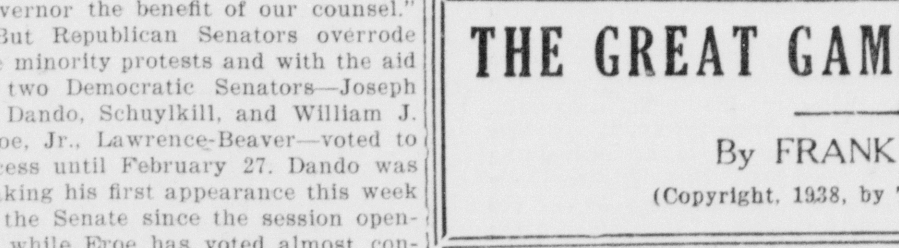

—O—

MOST of this has come from the extreme Left Wing New Dealers, and there seems to be a concerted effort among them to build Mr. Murphy up into a sort of glamorous Sir Galahad in whom is embodied almost superhuman virtue. It may be unfair to say that the Attorney General is co-operating in this, but it is certainly true to say that it does not offend him and that the sort of publicity which has emanated from him recently lends itself to the general idea. He is going to "clean up" the courts; he is going to see that everybody's civil rights are protected, and so forth.

—O—

THAT there should be a certain reaction against this sort of publicity is more or less natural—and there is. On the anti-Administration side, of course, there are sneers and jeers. The Attorney

COMPLETE SURVEY FOR PROPOSED NEW BRIDGE

May Erect New Span Between Milford, N. J., and Upper Black Eddy, Pa.

NOW CARRIES 5 TONS

Starting with a survey inaugurated last Summer, a study of the feasibility of building a new bridge between Upper Black Eddy, Pa., and Milford, N. J., has been completed. This study report is made by Louis Focht, who is superintendent and chief engineer for the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission.

It was after many residents of Milford urged replacement of the bridge, that the survey was begun. The present span has a capacity of five tons. Mr. Focht mentioned that the data gathered has not been fully analyzed, adding that he probably will report to the commission at its Spring meeting.

"Right now," the superintendent said, "we have no money to build any bridges."

DISCUSS SCHOOL PROBLEMS AT BOARD SESSION HERE

Bristol School Board Meets In Monthly Session In Wood Street School

HEAR MANY REPORTS

County Superintendent of Schools Harry Hoffman, and Assistant County Superintendent Charles Boehm, visited the Bristol School Board last night and discussed with the Board, in an informal way, the capability of the Bristol schools to accommodate non-resident pupils. The discussion was held as a means of gathering data for planning for the future the school accommodations throughout lower Bucks county.

The School Board met in the Wood street building and heard the reports of the various committees. Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property Committee, reported inspection had been made of the new addition to the high school and everything found to be satisfactory, with the exception of some minor details.

The Board unanimously voted its thanks and appreciation to the Property Committee for the efficient work it had done in connection with the building of the addition to the high school.

Mrs. Asa Fabian, school committee, reported having visited the Bath street, Wood street and the High School buildings. Mrs. Horace N. Davis, of the same committee, told the Board of her visits to the Bath street, Wood street and High School buildings.

Mrs. Fabian and Warren P. Snyder reported to the Board their observations of the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania School Directors' Convention held recently in Harrisburg.

Permission was granted the Alumni Association to use the high school auditorium for a dance.

The question of having pupils of the seventh and eighth grades enter into scholastic competition at the county meet was referred to the School Committee and Superintendent Snyder, with power to act. Entrance into the meet was urged by County Superintendent Hoffman, who said he favored such competition and thought it beneficial to the pupils.

The Board voted to appropriate $50 to Schoolman's Week.

A first and second choice selection was made of a substitute teacher to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Margaret Daum, member of commercial school faculty.

Cold Wave Checking Floods

(By International News Service)

A wave of bitter cold spread across the Middle West today, checking threats of a major flood in the lower Ohio River Valley but burdening thousands of families along swollen side streams with greater hardship.

The Red Cross and health authorities in dozens of sections were already fighting the peril of disease epidemics breaking out among the refugees.

The high waters still barred thousands from returning to their inundated homes in the lowlands or left houses uninhabitable as it receded and with the onslaught of colder weather shelter became an acute problem.

Freezing temperatures, however, relieved anxious residents along the lower reaches of the Ohio and were expected to bring the river to its flood crest sooner than predicted.

The cold swept down from the Canadian Northwest and was shunted eastward by the Rockies yesterday. At Havre, Mont., the mercury plunged to 29 degrees below zero and only slightly higher readings were recorded in Northern Colorado, Wyoming and North Dakota.

The icy front stretched from Missouri to the Canadian border as it bore eastward. It was considered likely that the zero mark would be touched in Chicago for the first time in three winters.

AS A SAVING GRACE

It is no easy matter for anyone to define the secret of national spirit. What has protected the American idea from the engulfing influence of movements inimical to democracy? There are many answers; for an instance, Franklin J. Meine's research fellow in American literature at Northwestern University, who pins his hopes to humor as one of the nation's sturdiest bulwarks against the encroachment of foreign ideologies.

Mr. Meine's collection of American humor, ranging from Yankee Doodle, which was first printed in broadside form about 1775, to Ring Lardner's You Know Me, Al, is on display in Chicago, the first of its kind ever made, and a demonstration that humor is a surprisingly natural part of everyday American life. The native comic spirit, say the sponsors of the show, has been evidenced since the earliest days of the nation, in literary and graphic manifestations, and by men and women in every walk of life. The foible and follies of each day and generation have been caught and caricatured, and in native idiom have been offered to tickle the risibilities of the people. Echoes of laughter may die away, but what remains is a sense of the utter lack of the seriousness or importance of the pompous and the demagogic, the utter emptiness of the stuffed shirt. The exhibit proves how completely the American has been able to laugh at himself. That may be a secret of his salvation.

THOUGHTS OF SPRING

While there is still ample time for several weeks of old-fashioned winter weather over a large part of these tropical United States all minds turn to thoughts of spring.

No matter what the next few weeks hold forth, spring is on the way. The red thread in the thermometer stands a little higher. The sun is deserting the southern horizon and each day arises a little earlier and retires a little later in the evening.

Already there must be a seasonal stirring in those roots and bulbs which make April gay with color. And soon they will be sending upward toward the lengthening sunlight those shoots of green which make early spring a time of pleasant surprises.

And when spring comes garden time is just around the corner. Garden catalogues and window displays have already made their appearance by popular demand to aid the suburbanite and the farmer in laying their plans for planting. And soon the familiar odors of plowing and budding time in the country will clash in the sensitive nostrils of the motorist.

Elsa Maxwell says that Brenda Frazier is handsome, level-headed and polite to old people. It is nice to hear of a deb, who is a credit to her folks.

The state of old England is even sorer than was thought. When Wally is to be courted, the entire ruling class develops a charley horse.

If dismissed from the relief picture, politics still can find much to do. There is no end to the job of farming the farmers.

And when the totalitarians have isolated us, will Japan recall an old favor and send an admiral over to rescue us from our hermit ways?

KIT CARSON—Avenger!

by EVELYN WELLS

SYNOPSIS

In the spring of 1829, Kit Carson, then 19, first rode with a party of trappers from Taos, New Mexico, across the desert and into California. The men sought beaver fur which was then to commerce what gold was later to become. Fighting the Apache, harried by Mexican authorities, ambushed by the Mojave redskins, adding always to their store of thick pelts—the party reached Los Angeles before they returned home. Again "Taos lightning" seared trapper throats, and for one brief week Kit knew riches and revelry. At length, "I'll never be such a tarnation fool again," vowed Kit, nor was he. In the fall of 1830 Kit rode again with a band of trappers who followed what would later be the Oregon trail. Snow—and Blackfoot Indians—halted them in the region which was later to become part of Wyoming. Kit first caught sight of a beautiful Blackfoot girl, who was to play so great a part in his destiny, as he and his men came upon some hostile Indians.

CHAPTER VII

Deadly enemies were about to clash desperately in this Wyoming pass, and this slender girl with the Blackfeet was against Kit Carson. He dashed with the other trappers toward the opening into the plain. But his head turned to watch her. The Indians on the hill raved along the skyline. Their flint-tipped arrows came down like plummet. One brought death to a trapper riding beside Kit Carson.

He found himself thinking "If we fought them—captured her."

No chance for fighting. They could only scurry before the storming arrows. Out of the pass they raced to the safe snowy plain. Looking back they saw the Blackfeet watching from the hill.

"They won't follow," said Kit. "Say, men, warn't she a beauty?"

But no one else had noticed the girl in white doekin with wampum studding her long dark braided hair. They had recognized the man she rode beside as the great Blackfoot, Chief Red Bear, noted for his ferocity.

"Durned if I'm not beginning to think I dreamed her," Kit was telling himself before long.

But when at night the stars pressed over the stillness of the Wyoming he saw her image clearly outlined against them.

In winter camp on the Arkansas River, Kit got permission to pursue some Crow horse thieves. With eleven men he had been scouring a wild region for days, when...

Turning toward the snow-burdened trees they saw smoke rising. The Indians they were hunting were there dancing the horse-steal dance behind sagebrush breastworks. The stolen horses were tied to trees.

"We'll try Injun tricks on those Crows," began Kit and then started. "Say, look at that Chief with the shield. He's no Crow. That's Red Bear." With a shock he remembered the girl who had ridden beside this notorious Blackfoot chief.

"Crow and Blackfeet together," thought Kit, studying the scene in the cove, "that means trouble in any language. We'll wait till night."

That night while the dance-wearied Indians slept, Kit and three other trappers crawled on hands and knees over the snow to the Indian camp. Not a dog barked as they cut the leather thongs from the stolen horses and drove them lightly away.

Joining the other men, Kit shook with laughter.

"We showed those Injuns a trick," he chuckled and then sobered. "Now we'll have to be ready for them. Sooner or later we'll have to fight them. How about now?"

Was it revenge Kit wanted, or was he thinking of Chief Red Bear asleep under his painted shield and the mystery of a girl in white doekin? He pictured her riding over the pass, her eyes meeting his, two hundred feet below, contemptuous and yet strangely gentle. He thought, "If a man could but tame her..."

men back to the Indian encampment when the sun rose over the world of snow?

They left their horses with two men. One was Juan, an Indian boy Kit had brought from Oregon. The other crept on hands and knees over the snow, rifles and knives ready. This would be hand-to-hand fighting.

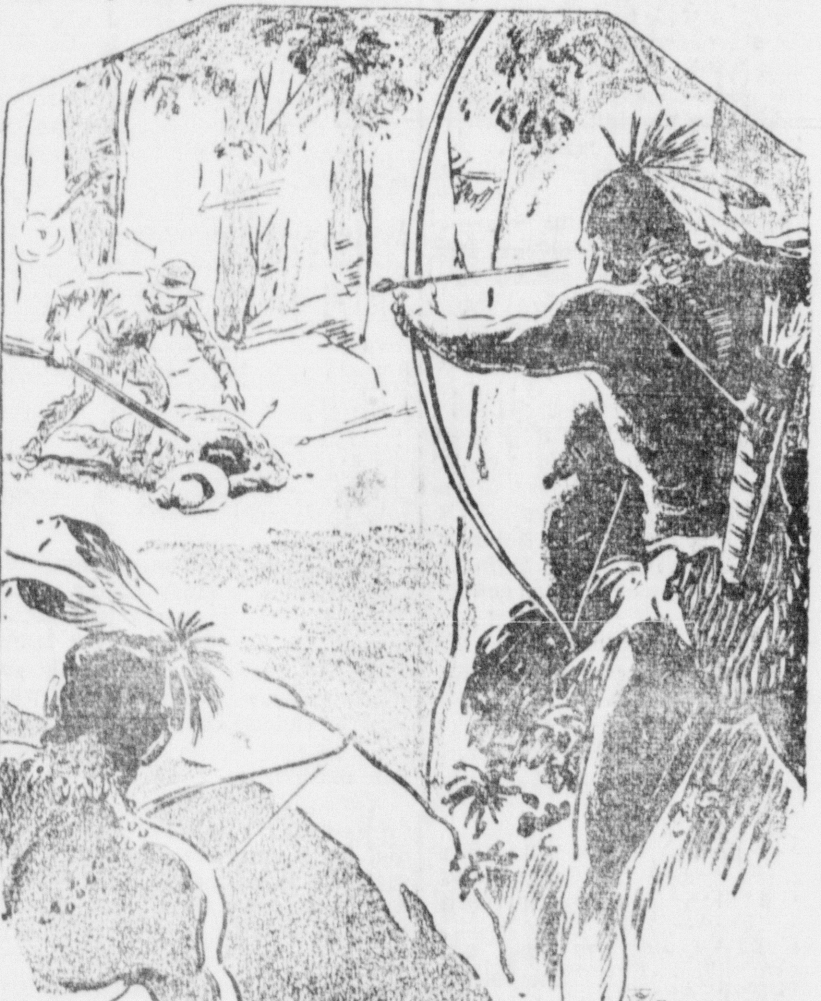

Kit stood to look over the brushwood barricade. He counted forty Blackfeet and Crow warriors lying muffled in blankets around smoldering fires. In the center Red Bear slept under his buffalo hide shield. Even in sleep his dark face was hawklike and arrogant.

Was it jealousy? Kit hated that open to train their arrows on the dying trapper as Kit Carson ran from the shelter of his tree trunk in a mad attempt to save Jones.

A dozen arrows showered the wounded Jones as Kit sprang forward, caught up the trapper and dragged him to safety. Behind another tree he saw a trapper curl slowly downward, and soon the trampled snow under his buffalo-hide boots became crimson.

"We'll have to get out of here!" yelled Kit. But his men were already retreating from the grove, running from tree to tree, turning to fire at the stalking redskins. As he strained, pulling Jones over the snow, he saw the other wounded sleeping Indian. Derisively he gave the Apache war cry learned on the plains.

Dogs barked, men sprang to their feet clutching weapons. Foremost was Red Bear and Kit knew why he was high chief among Blackfeet. Taller than Kit, broader and lither, Red Bear was the supreme savage in paint and trappings of war.

Black eyes and granite met over the sagebrush barricade. The same thoughts glanced like arrows between red chief and white trapper. "Death for one of us!" thought Kit, and shouted the order for his men to fire.

The ten trappers stood behind trees and fired. Ten rifle balls roared into the brushwood barricade. Nine Indians died, Kit learned later.

But it was the Chief he wanted. And Red Bear's hatred for Kit seemed deep as Kit's for him. He led the Indians who broke down the rear of their fort and crept around it from tree to tree stalking the white men. Hidden by alder they showered arrows from a new quarter upon the trappers who had thought them trapped within the barricade.

Taken by surprise the trappers ran for safety. Kit dashed behind another tree. An arrow struck his trunk as he gained shelter. Glancing back he saw Red Bear's savage features behind a powerful bow. Behind him the other trappers were trying to spread out so they could not be surrounded. Rifle balls passed whizzing arrows. Jones, one of the trappers, leaned from his shelter to fire.

"Careful, Jones!" shouted Kit, but too late. He had seen a copper arm flex a giant bow and, as he shouted, an arrow ran through Jones' body. The shaft showed hideously red through its victim's back as he pitched forward.

A dozen Indians sprang into the trapper painfully dragging his way to another tree trunk.

The man was close to death. But dread of Indian torture could keep a man struggling to escape while dying. Kit's heart turned within him.

"Jim! Johnson!" he shouted to the seven trappers. "Form a circle." Instantly his men responded. They ran from the safety of alder trunks and closed in around the wounded men. In a fighting circle they backed their way out of the woods but before they reached the clearing two others were struck by arrows. Juan, the Indian boy, stood holding their horses.

"Get the wounded on the horses. We're safe now. Indians won't follow out of the woods."

As Kit spoke, he turned and saw a giant form gleaming under a tree, a savage scowling face behind a chief's shield. Red Bear had followed, his arrow trained on Kit Carson.

In that moment Kit Carson recognized a great chief. Red Bear was fearless. Red Bear alone had dared follow Kit to the woods' edge. Now his body pulled back in straining bronze from a mighty bow and a yard-long, feathered, flint-tipped arrow sped for Kit's heart.

Kit was holding the Maid by her bridle. In that moment his beloved horse turned her great eyes on him. Her head was Kit's shield, for the chief's arrow struck her soft throat. As the saddle-colored mare fell in the convulsions of death, Kit knew fury. He had loved the Maid, the first horse he had ever owned, gift of his Captain Young. He had ridden her to California, to adventure and romance. Now his cold glance went down his long rifle barrel to that copper face behind a second arrow.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND

"Comet Over Broadway," the Warner Bros. drama which will open at the Grand on Wednesday, was adapted from Faith Baldwin's Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Mark Hellinger and Robert Buckner, an array of writing talent such as seldom is assembled on one picture. Faith Baldwin, whose fiction is well-known and loved the world over, has often sold stories to Hollywood, but not often has so distinguished a columnist and dramatist as Hellinger been given the job of adapting them for the screen. Buckner, his collaborator, is also an outstanding member of the writing fraternity.

Kay Francis heads the cast of "Comet Over Broadway," which includes such brilliant players as Ian Hunter, John Littel, Minna Gombel, Donald Crisp, the capable little nine-year-old Sybil Jason, and many others. Busy

RITZ THEATRE, CROYDON

The usually sombre, gray walls of a state prison are transformed into a background for uproarious comedy in 20th Century-Fox's "Up the River," due to open today at the Ritz Theatre.

Announced as a combination of music, broad comedy situations and do-or-die football (all for dear old "Pen") the film features Preston Foster, Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Slim Summerville, Arthur Treacher and Bill Robinson as inmates of a screwball penitentiary where they have a radio in every cell and gates that are practically revolving doors.

The cycle of grim prison melodramas with their solemn and worthy messages of social reform, has just about run itself out in the opinion of Alfred Werker, who directed "Up the River."

BRISTOL HIGH WALLOPS BORDENTOWN, 37 TO 16

Coach Steve Juenger's Bristol High quintet donned their high scoring togs once again as they walloped the Bordentown High passers on the local court here last night to the tune of 37-16. By virtue of their triumph, the Cards chalked up their tenth victory of the present season as compared to only one defeat.

Big rallies in both the second and third periods enabled the local lads to pull away from the invaders in rapid succession after being able to garner only a single point, 6-5, lead at the end of the first period. But by half-time, they had amassed a 19-6 edge, which they increased to 32-12 when the fourth period rolled around. By that time, they decided to call it quits in the scoring column and relaxed a bit. And yet while they were playing more of a defensive game in that last canto, they were able to outscore their rivals again, by a point, 5-4.

Strangely enough but appropriate enough two rather obscure individuals paced the Cards to their tenth triumph while the third to lead the local scorers is a regular starter. Steve Florito's ten points on four field goals and two fouls was single high for Bristol. But the substitute starters who starred in this tilt were Joe Quigley and Joe Pica, both of whom were close follow-ups of Florito for scoring honors with 9 and 8 points respectively.

TWO FORWARDS STEAL SHOW AT SOUTHAMPTON

SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 8—The tale of the Bensalem-Southampton girls' basketball game played here last night in which Bensalem won by the handy margin of 43-22, might be summed up in a pair of forwards named Betty who participated.

For literally Betty Bound of Bensalem, and Betty Johnson of Southampton stole the show in this game. In fact, during the first three periods of the game, it was an individual race for high scoring honors with the two individuals running neck and neck. Bound had a 19-14 edge however.

As indicated in the final score Bound won over Johnson. The final score was Bound, 29; Johnson, 18. And, although that was not the ultimate count, the two individuals represent the winning and losing teams in the individual scoring race between the pair of star forwards. Bound, in scoring the amazing total of 29 tallies for one half game, created a new individual scoring record among girls' teams in the Lower Bucks circuit for a single game. She stacked up no less than 14 field goals and tossed in a foul to establish a new record for herself.

BRONKO NAGURSKI TO FACE BIBBER MCCOY

TRENTON, Feb. 8—Bronko Nagurski, former heavyweight champion, will make his second appearance in as many weeks tonight at the Arena. He faces Bibber McCoy, Boston Strong Boy, and the only man aside from Jimmy Londos who holds a fall over Nagurski. It will be a best two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit affair and Promoter Johnny Ipp has this main event backed by a strong supporting card.

In his first appearance last week, Bronko handily disposed of Chief Little Wolf in two straight falls. He demonstrated a world of power and a keen knowledge of wrestling holds. The former All American from Minnesota, who defeated Dean Detton for the championship two years ago, impressed local fandom with his tremendous strength and ability.

McCoy blasted Slammih' Sammy Cohen from the local wrestling scene and earned the plaudits of the fans for accomplishing the feat.

Pete Peterson, stream-lined New York Dane, faces Babe Zaharias, the crying Greek from Cripple Creek, Colorado, in the semi-windup. This should be one of the best bouts ever contested here.

George Penchoff, English-born Russian, who landed here on the S. S. Georgia last Sunday, will face Wildman Walter Zim, the Man from Mars.

Angelo Leone, fiery Italian, meets Ace Gordon, speeded New Englander and Chief Sanook, 330 pound Indian, faces Sid Westrich of Hungary, in the opening fray.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m. and there will be no advance in prices.

BENSALEM LOSES TO SOUTHAMPTON, 30-17

SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 8—Coach John Slaven's Bensalem Owls dropped their seventh Lower Bucks County League game in a row when they came out on the short end of a 30-17 score in their tussle with the Southampton Greyhounds here last night.

As a result of the setback, the Owls lost all hope of eventually coming out of the gloomy dark dungeon of the league basement since their only chance for a victory now might be at the expense of the Buckingham Buccaneers, who are not doing bad by themselves this season and even a win over them would be an upset.

General's extreme nobility is a subject of ribald jest. However, it is more interesting that in what are regarded as New Deal inner circles there should be a disposition to argue that the Murphy eulogies are somewhat overdone. Particularly, this is so, it is intimated, if there is any intention of building him up as a candidate for either Presidential or Vice-Presidential nomination in 1940.

THERE may be no thought of that behind the extraordinary greasing which has been going on and Mr. Murphy may be a very virtuous and unselfish man, indeed. Nevertheless, the extremes to which the eulogies have extended are such as to make likely several developments well calculated to be embarrassing to him later on. One is that it is bound to be a strain upon the man to live up to the picture. Another is that any lapses from complete political purity, which would pass more or less unnoticed in an ordinary politician or jobholder, are sure to seem almost sensational in him.

STILL another is the inevitable resentment which the character of the Murphy praise is bound to engender among some of his co-workers in the Roosevelt vineyard. A custom has grown up among these of referring to each other and having their friends refer to them as "Great Americans." Mr. Hopkins is frequently called a "Great American" by his former WPA aides. Mr. Marriner Eccles not long ago was called a "Great American" by an enthusiastic advocate of letting the budget balance itself. Mr. Ickes has been called a "Great American" and so has Mr. Aubrey Williams.

EVEN before his Michigan defeat in November Mr. Murphy was admitted to the "Great American" Club and that aroused no feeling. It is the effort to make him out a saint as well as a "Great American" that is causing the irritation. It leads to low rumblings to the broad general effect that fundamentally Mr. Murphy is a lame duck Governor, emphatically rejected by his State, taken care of by the President because of his personal political loyalty and as complete a yes man—as far as Mr. Roosevelt is concerned—as there is in the Cabinet, not excepting Mr. Hopkins. There is no question about Mr. Murphy's personal character nor of his ability. Undoubtedly he has good qualities, but it is no favor to him that they should be so portrayed as to cause even some of his friends to gag. It will be a measure of Mr. Murphy's caliber whether he permits it to continue or calls a halt.

new bridges without asking legislative approval, he said.

Tentative plans call for relocating the span about 2,500 feet below the present bridge to eliminate "a dangerous approach grade on the New Jersey side."
